

DR. KAYE HUSBANDS FEALING is a senior program director at the National Academies' Committee on National Statistics. She is on leave from the Hubert H. Humphrey School of Public Affairs, University of Minnesota, where she is a professor in the Center for Science, Technology, and Public Policy. Prior to teaching at the Humphrey School, she was the William Brough professor of economics at Williams College, where she began her teaching career in 1989. Dr. Husbands Fealing developed the National Science Foundation's Science of Science and Innovation Policy program and co-chaired the Science of Science Policy Interagency Task Group. At NSF, she also served as an economics program director. Dr. Husbands Fealing was a visiting scholar at Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Center for Technology Policy and Industrial Development, where she conducted research on NAFTA's impact on the Mexican and Canadian automotive industries, and research on strategic alliances between aircraft contractors and their subcontractors. Dr. Husbands Fealing received the distinction of Teacher of the Year for academic years 2008-09 and 2009-10 from the Humphrey School of Public Affairs. She serves on review panels and boards at the National Science Foundation and is a member of the AAAS Committee on Science, Engineering, and Public Policy. She is also a board member and Midwest representative for the American Economic Association's Committee on the Status of Women in the Economics Profession. She co-edited the The Science of Science Policy: A Handbook, with Julia Lane, John H. Marburger III and Stephanie Shipp. Dr. Husbands Fealing has a B.A. degree in mathematics and economics from the University of Pennsylvania, and a Ph.D. degree in economics from Harvard University.